NEVER PERISH

And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.—John 10:28

THERE are two points in religion on which the teaching of the Bible is very plain and distinct. One of these points is the fearful danger of the ungodly: the other is the perfect safety of the righteous. One is the happiness of those who are converted: the other is the misery of those who are unconverted. One is the blessedness of being in the way to heaven: the other is the wretchedness of being in the way to hell.

I hold it to be of the utmost importance that these two points should be constantly on the minds of professing Christians. I believe that the exceeding privileges of the children of God and the deadly peril of the children of the world should be continually set forth in the clearest colors before the church of Christ. I believe that the difference between the man in Christ and the man not in Christ can never be stated too strongly and too fully. Reserve on this subject is a positive injury to the souls of men. Wherever such reserve is practiced, the careless will not be aroused, believers will not be established, and the cause of God will receive damage.

Reader, perhaps you are not aware what a vast store of comfortable<sup>1</sup> truths the Bible contains for the benefit of real Christians. There is a spiritual treasure-house in the Word which many never enter, and some eyes have not so much as seen. There you will find many a golden truth besides the old first principles of repentance, faith, and conversion. There you will find in glorious array the everlasting election of the saints in Christ, the special love wherewith God loved them before the foundation of the world, their mystical union with their risen Head in Heaven and His consequent sympathy with them, their interest in the perpetual intercession of Jesus their High Priest, their liberty of daily communion with the Father and the Son, their full assurance of hope, [and] their perseverance to the end. These are some of the precious things laid up in Scripture for those who love God. These are truths which some neglect from ignorance. Like the Spaniards in California, they know not the rich mines beneath their feet. These are truths which some neglect from false humility. They look at them afar off, with fear and trembling, but dare not touch them. But these are truths which God has given for our learning and which you and I are bound to study. It is impossible to neglect them without inflicting injury upon ourselves.

It is to one special truth in the list of a believer's privileges that I now desire to direct your attention this day. That truth is the doctrine of perseverance—the doctrine that true Christians shall never perish nor be cast away. It is a truth which the natural heart has bitterly opposed in every age. It is a truth which, for many reasons, deserves particular attention at the present time. Above all, it is a truth with which the happiness of all God's children is most closely connected.

There are four things which I propose to do in considering the subject of perseverance. (1) I will explain what the doctrine of perseverance means; (2) I will show the scriptural grounds on which the doctrine is built; (3) I will point out some reasons why many reject the doctrine; (4) I will mention some reasons why the doctrine is of great practical importance.

I approach the subject with diffidence, because I know it is one on which holy men do not see alike. But God is my witness that in writing this I have no desire to promote any cause but that of spiritual truth. In pleading for perseverance, I can say with good conscience, that I firmly believe I am pleading for an important part of the gospel of Christ. May God the Spirit guide both writer and reader into all truths! May that blessed day soon come when all shall know the Lord and differences and divisions pass away forever!

1. What Is Meant By the Doctrine of Perseverance?

It is of the utmost importance to make this point clear. It is the very foundation of the subject. It lies at the threshold of the whole argument. In all discussions of disputed points in theology it is impossible to be too accurate in defining terms. Half the abuse which has unhappily been poured on perseverance has arisen from a thorough misunderstanding of the doctrine in question. Its adversaries have fought with phantoms of their own creation, and spent their strength in beating the air.

When I speak of the doctrine of perseverance, I mean this. I say that the Bible teaches that true Christians shall persevere in their religion to the end of their lives. They shall never perish. They shall never be lost. They shall never be cast away. Once in Christ, they shall always be in Christ. Once made children of God by adoption and grace, they shall never cease to be His children and become children of the devil. Once endued with the grace of the Spirit, that grace shall never be taken from them. Once pardoned and forgiven, they shall never be deprived of their pardon. Once joined to Christ by living faith, their union shall never be broken off. Once called by God into the narrow way that leads to life, they shall never be allowed to fall into hell. In a word, every man, woman, and child on earth that receives saving grace shall sooner or later receive eternal glory. Every soul that is once justified and washed in Christ's blood shall at length be found safe at Christ's right hand in the Day of Judgment.

Such statements as this sound tremendously strong, I know that well. But I am not going to leave the subject here. I must dwell upon it a little longer. I desire to clear the doctrine I am defending from the cloud of misinterpretation by which many darken it. I want you to see it in its own proper dress—not as it is portrayed by the hand of ignorance and prejudice, but as it is set forth in the Scripture of truth.

Perseverance is a doctrine with which the ungodly and worldly have nothing to do. It does not belong to that vast multitude who have neither knowledge nor thought, nor faith nor fear, nor anything else of Christianity except the name. It's not true of them that they will "never perish." On the contrary, except they repent, they will come to a miserable end.

Perseverance is a doctrine with which hypocrites and false professors have nothing to do. It does not belong to those unhappy people whose religion consists in talk and words and a form of godliness, while their hearts are destitute of the grace of the Spirit. It is not true of them, that they will "never perish." On the contrary, except they repent they will be lost forever.

Perseverance is the peculiar privilege of real, true, spiritual Christians. It belongs to the sheep of Christ who hear His voice and follow Him. It belongs to those who are washed, and justified, and sanctified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of God. It belongs to those who repent and believe in Christ and live holy lives. It belongs to those who have been born again and converted and made new creatures by the Holy Ghost. It belongs to those who are of a broken and contrite heart, and mind the things of the Spirit, and bring forth the fruits of the Spirit. It belongs to the elect of God, who cry to Him night and day. It belongs to those who know the Lord Jesus by experience, and have faith, and hope, and love. It belongs to those who are fruit-bearing branches of the vine, the wise virgins, the light of the world, the salt of the earth, the heirs of the kingdom, the followers of the Lamb. These are they whom the Bible calls the saints. And it is the saints and the saints alone of whom it is written that they shall "never perish."

Does anyone suppose that what I am saying applies to none but eminent saints? Does anyone think that people like the apostles and prophets and martyrs may perhaps persevere to the end, but it cannot be said of the common sort of believers? Let him know that he is entirely mistaken. Let him know that this privilege of perseverance belongs to the whole family of God: to the youngest as well as the oldest, to the weakest as well as the strongest, to the babes in grace as well as the old pillars of the church. The least faith shall as certainly continue indestructible as the greatest. The least spark of grace shall prove as unquenchable as the most burning and shining light. Your faith may be very feeble, your grace may be very weak, your strength may be very small, you may feel that in spiritual things you are but a child. Yet fear not, neither be afraid. It is not on the quantity of a man's grace, but on the truth and genuineness of it that the promise turns. Wherever sin is truly repented of, and Christ is truly trusted, and holiness is truly followed, there is a work that shall never be overthrown. It shall stand when the earth and all its works shall be burned up.

There are further things to be said about perseverance to which I must request your special attention. Without them, the account of the doctrine would be imperfect and incomplete. The mention of them may clear up some of the difficulties which surround the subject, and throw light on some points of Christian experience, which God's children find hard to understand.

Remember that when I tell you believers shall persevere to the end I do not for a moment say that they shall never fall into sin. They may fall sadly, foully, and shamefully, to the scandal of true religion, to the injury of their families, to their own deep and bitter sorrow. Noah once fell into drunkenness. Abraham twice said falsely that Sarah was only his sister. Jacob deceived his father Isaac. Moses spoke unadvisedly with his lips. David committed horrible adultery. Solomon lost his first love and was led away by his many wives. Hezekiah forgot God and boasted of his riches. Peter denied his Lord three times with an oath. The apostles all forsook Christ in the garden. All these are cases in point. They are all melancholy proofs that Christians may fall. But believers shall never fall totally, finally, and completely. They shall always arise again from their falls by repentance, and renew their walk with God. Though sorely humbled and cast down, they never lose their grace. The comfort of it they may lose, but not the being. Like the moon under an eclipse, their light for a season turned into darkness, but they are not rejected and cast away. Like the trees in winter, they may show neither leaves nor fruit for a time, but the life is still in their roots. They may be overtaken by a fault and carried away by temptation. But they never perish.

Remember, for another thing, that when I say believers shall persevere to the end I do not mean that they shall have no doubts and fears about their own safety. So far from this being the case, the holiest men of God are sometimes sorely troubled by anxieties about their own spiritual condition. They see so much weakness in their own hearts, and find their practice come so short of their desires, that they are strongly tempted to doubt the reality of their own grace and to fancy they are but hypocrites and shall never reach heaven at all. To be safe is one thing; to feel sure that we are safe is another. There are many true believers who never enjoy the full assurance of hope all their days. Their faith is so weak and their sense of sin is so strong, that they never feel confident of their own interest in Christ. Many a time they could say with David, "I shall now perish one day" (1Sa 27:1) and with Job, "Where is now my hope?" (Job 17:15). The joy and peace in believing which some feel, and the witness of the Spirit which some experience, are things which many believers, whose faith it is impossible to deny, never appear to attain. Called as they evidently are by the grace of God, they never seem to taste the full comfort of their calling. But still they are perfectly safe, though they themselves refuse to know it.

*More happy, but not more secure,
The glorified spirits in heaven.*

The full assurance of hope is not necessary to salvation. The absence of it is no argument against man's perseverance to the end. That mighty master of theology, John Bunyan, knew well what he wrote when he told us that Despondency and Much-afraid got safe to the Celestial City at last, as well as Mr. Valiant-for-the-truth. It is as true of the most doubting child of God, as it is of the strongest, that he shall “never perish.” He may never feel it. But it is true.

Remember in the last place, that the certain perseverance of believers does not free them from the necessity of watching, praying, and using means, or make it needless to ply<sup>2</sup> them with practical exhortations. So far from this being the case, it is just by the use of means that God enables them to continue in the faith. He uses warnings and conditional promises as part of the machinery by which He insures their final safety. The very fact that they despised the helps and ordinances which God has appointed would be a plain proof that they had no grace at all and were on the road to destruction. St. Paul, before his shipwreck, had a special revelation from God that he and all his ship’s company should get safe to land. But it is a striking fact that he said to the soldiers, “Except these [the seamen] abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved” (Act 27:31) He knew that the end was assured, but believed also that it was an end to be reached by the use of certain means. The cautions, and conditional promises, and admonitions to believers, with which the Scripture abounds, are all a part of the divine agency by which their perseverance is effected.<sup>3</sup> An old writer says, “They do not imply that the saints can fall away: but they are preservatives to keep them from falling away.” The man that thinks he can do without such cautions and despises them as legal may well be suspected as an imposter, whose heart has never yet been renewed. The man who has been really taught by the Spirit will generally have a humble sense of his own weakness and be thankful for anything which can quicken his conscience and keep him on his guard. They that persevere to the end are not dependent on any means but still are not independent of them. Their final salvation does not hang on their obedience to practical exhortations, but it is just in taking heed to such exhortations that they will always continue to the end. It is the diligent, the watchful, the prayerful, and the humble to whom belongs the promise “they shall never perish.”

I have now given you an account of what I mean when I speak of the doctrine of perseverance. This, and this only, is the doctrine that I am prepared to defend here. I ask you to weigh well what I have said, and to examine the statement I have made on every side. I believe it will stand inspection.

It will not do to tell us that this doctrine of perseverance has any tendency to encourage careless and ungodly living. Such a charge is utterly destitute of truth. It cannot justly be brought forward. I have not a word to say in behalf of anyone who lives in willful sin, however high his profession may be. He is deceiving himself. He has none of the marks of God’s elect. The perseverance I plead for is not that of sinners, but of saints. It is not a perseverance in carnal and ungodly ways, but a perseverance in the way of faith and grace. Show me a man that deliberately lives an unholy life and yet boasts that he is converted and shall never perish, and I say plainly that I see nothing hopeful about him. He may know all mysteries, and speak with the tongue of angels; but so long as his life is unaltered, he appears to me in the high road to hell.

It will not do to tell us that this doctrine of perseverance is merely a piece of Calvinism. Nothing is easier than to get up a prejudice against a truth by giving it a bad name. Men deal with doctrines they do not like, much as Nero did when he persecuted the early Christians. They dress them up in a hideous garment and hold them up to scorn and run them down. The perseverance of the saints is often treated in this manner. People stave it off by some sneering remark about Calvinism and think they have settled the question. Surely it would be more becoming to enquire whether perseverance was not taught in the Bible 1400 years before Calvin was born. The question to be decided is not whether the doctrine is Calvinistic, but whether it is Scriptural. The words of Bishop Horsley deserve to be widely known. "Take especial care," he says, "before you aim your shafts at Calvinism, that you know what is Calvinism and what is not;—that in the mass of doctrine which it is of late become the fashion to abuse under the name Calvinism, you can distinguish with certainty between that part of it which is nothing better than Calvinism, and that which belongs to our common Christianity and the general faith of the reformed churches;—lest, when you mean only to fall foul of Calvinism, you should unwarily attack something more sacred and of a higher origin."

Last, but not least, it will not do to tell us that perseverance is not the doctrine of the Church of England. Whatever men may please to say against it, this is an assertion at any rate which they find it hard to prove. Perseverance is taught in the seventeenth article of the Church of England, clearly, plainly, and unmistakably. It was the doctrine of the first five Archbishops of Canterbury, Parker, Grindal, Whitgift, Bancroft, and Abbott. It was the doctrine preached by the judicious Hooker, as anyone may see by reading his sermons. It was the doctrine by which all the leading divines of the Church of England maintained till the reign of Charles the First. The denial of the doctrine up to this time was hardly tolerated. More than one minister who called it in question was compelled to read a public recantation before the University of Cambridge. In short, till the time when Archbishop Laud came into power, perseverance was regarded in the Church of England as an acknowledged truth of the gospel. Together with the Popish leaven which Laud brought with him, there came an unhappy doctrine that true believers may fall away and perish. This is simple matter of history. The perseverance of the saints is the old doctrine of the Church of England. The denial of it is the new.

I feel it is time to leave this branch of the subject and pass on. I want no clearer and more distinct statement of perseverance than that contained in the seventeenth article of my own church to which I have already referred. That article says of God's elect, "They which be endued with so excellent a benefit of God, be called according to God's purpose by His Spirit working in due season: they through grace obey His calling: they be justified freely: they be made sons of God by adoption: they be made like the image of His only begotten Son Jesus Christ: they walk religiously in good works, and at length by God's mercy, they attain to everlasting felicity." These are precisely the views I maintain. This is the doctrine which I long ago subscribed to. This is the truth which I believe it is my duty, as a clergyman, to defend. This is the truth which I now want you to receive and believe.

2. The Scriptural Grounds for the Doctrine of Perseverance

I need hardly say that the Bible is the only test by which the truth of every religious doctrine can be tried. The words of the sixth article of the Church of England deserve to be written in letters of gold: "Whatsoever is not read in the Holy Scriptures is not to be required of any man that it should be believed as an article of the faith." By that rule I am content to abide. I ask no man to believe the final perseverance of the saints unless the doctrine can be proved to be that of the Word of God. One plain verse of Scripture, to my mind, outweighs the most logical conclusion to which human reason can attain.

In bringing forward those texts of Scripture on which this doctrine is founded, I purposely abstain from quoting from the Old Testament. I do so, lest any should say that the Old Testament promises belong exclusively to the Jewish people as a nation, and are not available in a disputed question affecting individual believers. I do not admit the soundness of this argument, but I will not give anyone the chance of using it. I find proofs in abundance in the New Testament, and to them I confine myself.

I shall write down the texts which appear to me to prove final perseverance without note or comment. I will only ask you to observe as you read them, how deep and broad is the foundation on which the doctrine rests. Observe that it is not for any strength or goodness of their own that the saints shall continue to the end, and never fall away. They are in themselves weak, and frail, and liable to fall like others. Their safety is based on the promise of God which was never yet broken, on the election of God which cannot be in vain, on the power of the great mediator Christ Jesus which is almighty, on the inward work of the Holy Ghost which cannot be overthrown. I ask you to read the following texts carefully, and see whether it is not so.

"I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand" (John 10:28-29).

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom 8:35-39).

“They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us” (1Jo 2:19).

“Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life” (Joh 5:24).

“I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever” (Joh 6:51).

“Because I live, ye shall live also” (Joh 14:19).

“Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die” (Joh 11:26).

“By one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified” (Heb 10:14).

“He that doeth the will of God abideth for ever” (1Jo 2:17).

“Sin shall not have dominion over you” (Rom 6:14).

“The very hairs of your head are all numbered” (Mat 10:30).

“A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench” (Mat 12:20).

“Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1Co 1:8).

“Kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time” (1Pe 1:5).

“Preserved in Jesus Christ, and called” (Jude 1:1).

“The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom” (2Ti 4:18).

“I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it” (1Th 5:23-24).

“The Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil” (2Th 3:3).

“God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it” (1Co 10:13).

“God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay upon the hope set before us” (Heb 6:17-18).

“Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the kingdom” (Luk 12:32).

“This is the Father’s will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day” (Joh 6:39).

“The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his” (2Ti 2:19).

“Whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified” (Rom 8:30).

“God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ” (1Th 5:9).

“God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth” (2Th 2:13).

“The vessels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory” (Rom 9:23).

“The gifts and calling of God are without repentance” (Rom 11:29).

“If it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect” (Matt 24:24).

“He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).

“Able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 1:24).

“I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day” (2Ti 1:12).

“I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not” (Luk 22:32).

“Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me” (Joh 17:11).

“I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil” (Joh 17:15).

“I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am” (Joh 17:24).

“If, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life” (Rom 5:10).

“The Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you” (Joh 14:17).

“Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6).

“The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him” (1Jo 2:27).

“The holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption” (Eph 4:30).

“Ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession” (Eph 1:13-14).

“Born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible” (1Pe 1:23).

“He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee” (Heb 13:5).

I lay before you these forty-four texts of Scripture, and ask your serious attention to them. I repeat that I will make no comment on them. I had rather leave them to the honest common sense of all who read the Bible. Some of these texts no doubt bring out the doctrine of final perseverance more clearly than others. About the interpretation of some of them, men’s judgments may differ widely. But there are not a few of the forty-four which appear to my mind so plain that, were I to invent words to confirm my views, I should despair of inventing any that would convey my meaning so unmistakably.

I am far from saying that these texts are all the Scriptural evidence that might be brought forward. I am satisfied that the doctrine maintained in this tract might be confirmed by other arguments of great and mighty power.

I might point to the attributes of God’s power revealed in the Bible, and show how His wisdom, unchangeableness, and power, and love, and glory are all involved in the perseverance of the saints. If the elect may finally perish, what becomes of God’s counsel about them in eternity and His doings for them in time?

I might point to all the offices which the Lord Jesus fills, and show what discredit is thrown on His discharge of them, if any of His believing people can finally be lost. What kind of Head would He be, if any of His mystical body could be torn from Him? What kind of Shepherd would He be, if a single sheep of His flock was left behind in the wilderness? What kind of Physician would he be, if any patient under His hand were at length found incurable? What kind of High Priest would he be, if any name once written on His heart were found wanting when He makes up his jewels? What kind of Husband would He be, if He and any soul once united to Him by faith were ever put asunder?

Finally I might point to that great fact that there is not a single example in all Scripture of any one of God’s elect ever finally making shipwreck and going to hell. We read of false prophets and hypocrites. We read of fruitless branches, stony ground and thorny ground hearers, virgins without oil in their vessels, servants who bury their talents. We read of Balaam and Lot’s wife, and Saul, and Judas Iscariot, and Ananias and Sapphira, and Demas. We see their hollow characters. We are told of their end. They have no root. They are rotten at the heart. They endure for a while. They go at last to their own place. But there is not a single instance in the whole Bible of anyone falling away who ever showed unquestionable evidences of grace. Men like Abraham and Moses, and David, and Peter, and Paul always hold on their way. They may slip. They may fall for a season. But they never entirely depart from God. They never perish. Surely if the saints of God can be cast away, it is a curious and striking fact that the Bible should not have given us one single plain example of it.

But time and space would fail me if I were to enter into a field I have just pointed out. I think it better to rest my case on the texts which I have already given. The mind to which these texts carry no conviction is not likely to be influenced by other arguments. To myself they appear, when taken altogether, to contain such an immense mass of evidence, that I dare not as a Christian man deny perseverance to be true. I dare not because I feel at this rate I might dispute the truth of any doctrine in the gospel. I feel that if I could explain away such plain texts as some of those I have quoted, I could explain away almost all the leading truths of Christianity.

I am quite aware that there are some texts and passages of Scripture which appear at the first sight to teach a contrary doctrine to that which I maintain in this tract. I know that many attach great weight to these texts and consider them to prove that the saints of God may perish and fall away. The following texts, on which the opponents of perseverance principally rely, appear to call for a brief notice.

Ezekiel 3:20 and 18:24. I can see no proof in either of these cases that “the righteous” here spoken of, is anything more than one whose outward conduct is righteous. There is nothing to show that he is one justified by faith and accounted righteous before God.

1 Corinthians 9:27. I see nothing in this but godly fear of falling into sin, which is one of the marks of a believer and distinguishes him from the unconverted and a simple declaration of the means which Paul used to preserve himself from being a castaway. It is like 1 John 5:18, “He that is begotten of God keepeth himself.”

John 15:2. This does not prove that true believers shall be taken from Christ. A branch that does not bear fruit is not a believer. “A lively faith,” says the 12th Article, “may be as evidently known by good works, as the tree is known by the fruit.”

1 Thessalonians 5:19. If “the Spirit” here means the Spirit in ourselves, it means no more than “grieving the Spirit” in Ephesians 4:30. But many think it is the Spirit’s gifts in others, and ought to be taken in connection with verse 20.

Galatians 5:4. The tenor of the whole Epistle seems to show that this “falling” is not from the inward grace of the Spirit, but from the doctrine of grace. The same remark applies to 2 Corinthians 6:1.

Hebrews 6:4-6. The person here described as falling away has no characteristics which may not be discovered in unconverted men, while it is not said that he possesses saving faith and charity, and is elect.

John 8:31; Colossians 1:23. The conditional “if” in both of these verses and several others like them that might be quoted, does not imply an uncertainty as to the salvation of those described. It simply means that the evidence of real grace is continuance. False grace perishes. True grace lasts. “It is frequent in Scripture,” says Charnock, “to put into promises these conditions which in other places are promised to be wrought in us.”

I readily grant that these are not all the texts that the adversaries of final perseverance generally bring forward. But I believe they are principal ones. The weak point in their case is this—they have no text to prove that saints may fall away, which will at all compare with such an expression as “my sheep...shall never perish,” and they have no account to give of such a mighty saying as this promise of our Lord, which is at all satisfactory or even rational. John Goodwin, the famous Arminian, offers the following explanation of this text: “The promise of eternal safety made by Christ to His sheep doth not relate to their estate in the present world, but to that of the world to come.” A man must be sorely put to straits when he can argue in such a way.

I can only say that I have examined these texts with attention, but have found them in no reason to alter my opinion on the subject of perseverance. Their number is small. Their meaning is unquestionably more open to dispute than that of the forty-four I have quoted. They, all of them, admit of being interpreted so as not to contradict the doctrine of perseverance. I hold it to be an infallible rule in the exposition of Scripture, that when two texts seem to contradict one another, the less plain must give way to the more plain, and the weak must give way to the strong. The doctrine which reconciles most texts of Scripture is most likely to be right. That doctrine which makes most texts quarrel with one another is most likely to be wrong.

I ask you, if you are not convinced by all I have said hitherto, to put down the texts I have quoted on behalf of perseverance and the texts commonly quoted against it in two separate lists. Weigh them one against the other. Judge them with fair and honest judgment. Which list contains the greatest number of positive, unmistakable assertions? Which list contains the greatest number of sentences which cannot be explained away? Which list is the strongest? Which list is the weakest? Which list is the most flexible? Which list is the most unbending? If it were possible in a world like this to have this question fairly tried by an unprejudiced, intelligent jury, I have not the least doubt which way the verdict would go. It is my own firm belief and conviction that the final perseverance of the saints is so deeply founded on Scriptural grounds, that so long as the Bible is judged, it cannot be overthrown.

3. The Reasons Why So Many Reject the Doctrine of Perseverance

It is impossible to deny that multitudes of professing Christians entirely disagree with the views expressed here. I am quite aware that many regard them with abhorrence, as dangerous, enthusiastic, and fanatical, and lose no opportunity of warning people against them. I am also aware that among those who hold that the saints of God may fall away and perish are to be found many holy, self-denying, spiritually-minded persons—persons at whose feet I would gladly sit in heaven, though I cannot approve of all their teaching upon earth.

This being the case, it becomes a matter of deep interest to find out, if we can, the reasons why the doctrine of perseverance is so often refused. How is it that a doctrine for which so much Scripture can be alleged, should be so stoutly opposed? How is it that a doctrine which for the first hundred years of the Reformed Church of England it was hardly allowable to call into question, should now be so frequently rejected? What new views can have risen up in the last two centuries which make it necessary to discharge this good old servant of Christ? I am confident that such enquiries are of such importance in the present day. There is far more in this question than appears at first sight. I am satisfied that I am not wasting time in endeavoring to throw a little light on the whole subject.

I desire to clear the way by conceding that many good persons refuse the doctrine of perseverance for no reason whatever excepting that it is too strong for them. There are vast numbers of true-hearted Christians just now who never seem able to bear anything strong. Their religious constitution appears so feeble, and their spiritual digestion is so weak, that they must always be fed “with milk, and not with meat” (1Co 3:2). Talk to them strongly about grace, and they will put you down as an Antinomian! Talk strongly about holiness, and you are thought legal! Speak strongly of election, and you are considered a narrow-minded Calvinist! Speak strongly about responsibility and free agency, and you are regarded as a low Arminian! In short, they can bear nothing strong of any kind or in any direction. Of course they cannot receive the doctrine of perseverance.

I leave these people alone. I am sorry for them. There are sadly too many of them in the churches of Christ just now. I can only wish them better spiritual health, and less narrowness of views, and a quicker growth in spiritual knowledge. The persons I have in my mind’s eye here are of a different class, and to them I now address myself.

1. I believe one reason why many do not hold perseverance is their general ignorance of the whole system of Christianity. They have no clear idea of the nature, place, and proportion of the various doctrines which compose the gospel. Its several truths have no definite position in their minds. Its general outline is not mapped out in their understandings. They have a vague notion that it is a right thing to belong to the Church of Christ, and to believe all the articles of the Christian faith. They have a floating misty idea that Christ has done certain things for them, and that they ought to do certain things for Him, and if they do them it will be all right at last. But beyond this they really know nothing. Of the great systematic statements in the Epistles to the Romans, Galatians, and Hebrews, they are profoundly ignorant.

As to a clear account of justification, you might as well ask them to square the circle or write a letter in Sanskrit. It is a subject they have not even touched with the tips of their fingers. This is a sore disease and not only too common in England. Unhappily it is a disease of thousands who pass muster as excellent churchmen. It is absurd to expect such people to hold perseverance. When a man does not know what it is to be justified, he cannot of course understand what it is to persevere to the end.

2. I believe another reason why many do not hold perseverance is their dislike of any system of any religion which draws distinctions between man and man. There are not a few who entirely disapprove of any Christian teaching which divide the congregation into different classes, and speaks of one class of people as being in a better and more favorable state before God than another. Such people cry out that all teaching of this kind is uncharitable, that we ought to hope well of everybody, and suppose everybody will go to heaven. They think it downright wrong to say that one man has faith and another has not, one is converted and another not, one a child of God and another a child of the world, one a saint and another a sinner. "What right have we to think anything about it?" they say. "We cannot possibly know. Those whom we call good are very likely no better than others—hypocrites, impostors, and the like. Those of whom we think badly are very probably quite as much in the way to heaven as the rest of mankind, and have got good hearts at the bottom." As to anyone feeling sure of heaven, or confident of his own salvation, they consider it quite abominable. "No man can be sure. We ought to hope well of all." There are too many people of this sort in the present day. Of course the doctrine of perseverance is perfectly intolerable to them. When a man refuses to allow that anyone is elect, or has grace, or enjoys any special mark of God's favor more than his neighbors, it stands to reason that he will deny that anyone can have the grace of perseverance.

3. I believe another common reason why many do not hold perseverance is an incorrect view of the nature of saving faith. They regard faith as nothing better than a feeling or impression. As soon as they see a man somewhat impressed with the preaching of the gospel, and manifesting some pleasure in hearing about Christ, they set him down at once as a believer. Gradually the man's impressions wear away, and his interest about Christ and salvation ceases altogether. Where is the faith he seemed to have? It is gone. How can his friends who had pronounced him as a believer account for it? They can only account for it by saying that a man may fall away from faith and that there is no such thing as perseverance. And in short, this becomes an established principle in their religion. Now this is a mischievous error, and I am afraid sadly common in many quarters. It manifestly may be traced to ignorance of the true nature of religious affections. People forget that there may be many religious emotions in the human mind with which grace has nothing to do. The stony-ground hearers received the word with joy, but had no root in themselves. The history of all revivals proves that there may be a great quantity of seemingly religious impression without any true work of the Spirit. Saving faith is something far deeper and mightier than a little sudden feeling. It is an act not of the feelings only but of the whole conscience, will, understanding, and inward man. It is the result of clear knowledge. It springs from a conscience not grazed merely, but thoroughly stirred. It shows itself in a deliberate, willing, humble dependence on Christ. Such faith is the gift of God and is never overthrown. Make faith a mere matter of feeling, and it is of course impossible to maintain perseverance.

4. I believe another reason why many do not hold perseverance is near akin to the one last mentioned. It is an incorrect view of the nature of conversion. Not a few are ready to pronounce any change for the better in a man's character at conversion. They forget that there may be many blossoms on a tree in spring, and yet no fruit in autumn, and that a new coat of paint does not make an old door new. Some, if they see anyone weeping under the influence of a sermon, will set it down at once as a case of conversion. Others, if a neighbor suddenly gives up drinking or swearing, and becomes a great communicant<sup>4</sup> and a great professor,<sup>5</sup> at once rush to the conclusion that he is converted. The natural consequences in numerous instances is disappointment. Their supposed case of conversion often turns out nothing more than a case of outward reform, in which the heart was never changed. Their converted neighbor sometimes returns to his old bad habits as the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire. But then unhappily the pride of the natural heart, which never likes to allow itself mistaken, induces people to form a wrong conclusion about the case. Instead of telling us that the man never was converted at all, they say that he was converted, but afterwards lost his grace and fell away. The true remedy for this is a right understanding of conversion. It is no such cheap and easy and common thing as many seem to fancy. It is a mighty work on the heart which none but He Who made the world can effect, and a work which will abide and stand the fire. But once take a low and superficial view of conversion, and you will find it impossible to maintain final perseverance.

5. I believe another most common reason why many do not hold perseverance is an incorrect view of the effect of baptism. They lay it down as a cardinal point in their divinity that all who are baptized are born again in baptism, and all receive the grace of the Holy Ghost. Without a single plain text in the Bible to support their opinions, and in the face of the 17th Article, which many of them as churchmen have subscribed, they still tell us that all baptized persons are necessarily regenerate. Of course such a view of baptism is utterly destructive of the doctrine that true grace can never be overthrown. It is plain as daylight that multitudes of baptized persons never show a spark of grace all their lives, and never give the slightest evidence of having been born of God. They live careless and worldly, and careless and worldly they die, and to all appearance miserably perish. According to the view to which I am now referring, they have all fallen away from grace! They all had it! They were all made God's children. But they all lost their grace! They have all become children of the devil! I will not trust myself to make a single remark on such doctrine. I leave those who can to reconcile it with the Bible. All I say is that if baptismal regeneration be true, there is an end to final perseverance.

6. I believe another reason why many do not hold perseverance is an incorrect view of the nature of the church. They make no distinction between the visible church which contains "evil as well as good," and the invisible church which is composed of none but God's elect and true believers. They apply to the one the privileges, and blessings, and promises which belong to the other. They call the visible church, with its crowds of ungodly members, and baptized infidels, "the mystical body of Christ, the Bride, the Lamb's wife, the Holy Catholic Church," and the like. They will not see what Hooker long ago pointed out, and his admirers would do well to remember, that all these glorious titles do not properly belong to any visible Church, but to the invisible company of God's elect. The consequence of all this confusion is certain and plain. Upon this man-made system they are obliged to allow that thousands of members of Christ's body have no life, no grace, no sympathy with their Head, and end at last by being ruined forever, and becoming lost members of Christ in hell! Of course, at this rate they cannot maintain the doctrine of perseverance. Once embrace the unscriptural notion that all members of the visible church are, by virtue of their churchmanship members of Christ, and the doctrine of this tract must be thrown aside. Oh! What a wise remark it is of Hooker's, "For want of diligent observing the difference between the church of God mystical and visible, the oversights are neither few nor light that have been committed."

I commend the things I have just been saying to your sincere and prayerful attention. I have gone through them at the risk of seeming wearisome, from a deep conviction of their great importance. I am sure if any part of this tract deserves consideration, it is this.

I entreat you to observe how important it is for Christians to be sound in the faith and to be armed with clear Scriptural knowledge of the whole system of the gospel. I fear the increasing tendency to regard all doctrinal questions as matters of opinion and to look on all earnest-minded men as right, whatever doctrines they maintain. I warn you that the sure result of giving way to this tendency will be a vague, low, misty theology—a theology containing no positive hope, no positive motive, and no positive consolation—a theology which will fail most, just when it is most wanted, in the day of affliction, the hour of sickness, and on the bed of death.

I know well that it is a thankless office to offer such warnings as these. I know well that those who give them must expect to be called bigoted, narrow-minded, and exclusive. But I cannot review the many errors which prevail on the subject of perseverance, without seeing more than ever the immense need there is for urging on all to be careful about doctrine. Oh! Learn to know what you mean when you talk of believing the doctrines of Christianity. Be able to give a reason of your hope. Be able to say what you think true, and what you think false in religion. And never, never forget that the only foundation of soundness in the faith is a thorough textual knowledge of the Bible.

I entreat you in the last place to observe how one error in religion leads on to another. There is a close connection between false doctrines. It is almost impossible to take up one alone. Once let a man get wrong about the church and the sacraments, and there is no saying how far he may go and where he may land at last. It is a mistake at the fountainhead that influences the whole course of his religion. The mistake about baptism is a striking illustration of what I mean. It throws a color over the whole of a man's divinity. It insensibly affects his views of justification, sanctification, election, and perseverance. It fills his mind with a tangled maze of confusion as to all leading articles of the faith. He starts with a theory for which no single plain text of Scripture can be alleged, and before this theory tramples down plain passages of the Bible by the score! They interfere, forsooth, with his favorite theory, and therefore, cannot mean what common sense tells us to do! Oh! Be as jealous about false doctrine as you would be about a little sin. Remember the words of St. Paul: “A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump” (Gal 5:9).

4. Reasons Why the Doctrine of Final Perseverance Is of Great Importance

When I speak of the importance of perseverance, I do not for a moment mean that it is necessary to salvation to receive it. I freely grant that thousands and tens of thousands have gone to heaven who believed all their lives that saints might fall away. But all this does not prove the doctrine maintained in this tract to be a matter of indifference. He that does not believe it, and yet is saved, no doubt does well. But I am persuaded that he that believes it and is saved is far better. I hold it to be one of the chief privileges of the children of God, and I consider that no privilege contained in the gospel can be lost sight of without injury to the soul.

1. Perseverance is a doctrine of great importance, because of the strong color which it throws on the whole statement of the gospel.

The grand characteristic of the gospel is that it is glad tidings. It is a message of peace to a rebellious world. It is good news from a far country, alike unexpected and undeserved. It is the glad tidings that there is hope for us, lost, ruined, and bankrupt as we are by nature—a hope of pardon, a hope of reconciliation with God, a hope of glory. It is the glad tidings that the foundation of this hope is mighty, deep, and broad; that it is built on the atoning death and gracious mediation of a Savior. It is the glad tidings of God, able to save to the uttermost all who come to God by Him (Heb 7:25), and no less merciful, compassionate, and ready to save than able. It is the glad tidings that the way to pardon and peace by the Savior is the simplest possible—it is not a thing high in heaven that we cannot reach, or deep in the depths that we cannot fathom—it is simply to believe, to trust, and to cast ourselves wholly on Jesus for salvation, and salvation is all our own. It is the glad tidings that all who believe are at once justified and forgiven all things; their sins, however many, are washed away: their souls, however unworthy, are counted righteous before God. They believe on Jesus, and therefore they are saved. This is the good news. This is the glad tidings. This is the truth which is the grand peculiarity of the gospel. Happy indeed is he that knows and believes it!

But think for a moment what a mighty difference it would make in the sound of the gospel, if I went on to tell you that after receiving all these mercies you might lose them entirely. What would your feelings be if I told you that you were in daily peril of forfeiting all those privileges and having your pardon sealed in Christ's blood taken back again? What would you think if I told you that your safety was yet an uncertain thing, and that you might yet perish and never reach heaven at all? Oh, how much of the grace and beauty of the glorious gospel would disappear and fade away! Yet this is literally and exactly the conclusion to which a denial of perseverance must bring us.

Once admit the saints of God may perish, and you seem to tear from the gospel crown its brightest jewel. We are hanging on edge of a precipice. We are kept in awful suspense until we are dead. To tell us that there are plenty of gracious promises to encourage us, if we will only persevere, is but mockery. It is like telling the sick man that if he will only get well he will be strong. The poor patient feels no confidence that he will get well, and the poor weak believer feels nothing in him like power to persevere. Today he may be in Canaan, and tomorrow he may be in Egypt again and in bondage! This week he may be in the narrow way: but, for anything he knows, next week he may be back in the broad road! This month he may be a justified, pardoned, and forgiven man: but next month his pardon may be all revoked, and he himself in a state of condemnation. This year he may have faith and be a child of God: next year he may be a child of the devil and have no part or lot in Christ! Where is the good news in all this? What becomes of the glad tidings? Verily such doctrine seems to cut up the joy of the gospel by the roots. Yet this is the doctrine we must hold if we reject the final perseverance of the saints.

I bless God that I am able to see another kind of gospel than this in the Word of God. To my eyes the Bible seems to teach that he who once begins the life of faith in Christ shall without doubt be preserved from apostasy and come to a glorious end. Once made alive by the grace of God, he shall live forever. Once raised from the grave of sin and made a new man, he shall never go back to the grave and become once more the man dead in trespasses and sin. He shall be “kept by the power of God” (1Pe 1:5). He shall be more than conqueror through Him that loved him (Rom 8:37). The eternal God is his refuge; underneath him are the everlasting arms (Deu 33:27). The love in which he is interested is eternal. The righteousness in which he is clothed is eternal. The redemption which he enjoys is eternal. The sense and comfort of it he may lose by his own carelessness. But the thing itself, after once believing, is his forevermore.

Reader, look at the two ways in which the weary and heavy-laden sinner may be addressed, and judge for yourself which is most like the gospel of the grace of God. On the one side stands the doctrine which says, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved. Once believing, thou shalt never perish. Thy faith shall never be allowed entirely to fail. Thou shalt be sealed by the Holy Spirit unto the day of redemption.” On the other side stands the doctrine which says, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. But after thou hast believed take care. Thy faith may fail. Thou mayest fall away. Thou mayest drive the Spirit from thee. Thou mayest at length perish everlastingly.” Which doctrine of these two contains most good news? Which is the most glad tidings? Is it all the same which way the sinner is addressed? Is it a matter of indifference whether we tell him that believing he is saved, unless he falls away, or whether we tell him that believing he is saved forever? I cannot think it. I regard the difference between the two doctrines as very great indeed. It is the difference between January and June. It is the difference between twilight and noonday.

I speak for myself. I cannot answer for the experience of others. To give me solid peace, I must know something about my future prospects as well as my present position. It is pleasant to see my pardon today. But I cannot help thinking of tomorrow. Tell me that He Who leads me to Christ and gives me repentance and faith in Him will never leave me nor forsake me, and I feel solid comfort. My feet are on a rock. My soul is in safe hands. I shall get safe home. Tell me, on the other hand, that after being led to Christ, I am left to my own vigilance, and that it depends on my watching, and praying, and care, whether the Spirit leaves me or no, and my heart melts within me. I stand on a quicksand. I lean on a broken reed. I shall never get to heaven. It is vain to tell me of the promises: they are only mine if I walk worthy of them. It is vain to talk to me of Christ's mercy: I shall lose all my interest in it by indolence and self-will. The absence of the doctrine of perseverance appears to me to give a different color to the whole gospel of Christ. You cannot wonder if I regard it of great importance.

2. But the doctrine of perseverance is also of importance, because of the special influence it is calculated to have on all who halt between two opinions in religion.

There are many persons of this description in the visible church of Christ. There are many to be found in every congregation to which the gospel of Christ is preached, who know well what is right, and yet have not courage to act up to their knowledge. Their consciences are awakened. Their minds are comparatively enlightened. Their feelings are partially aroused to a sense of the value of their souls. They see the path they ought to take. They hope one day to be able to take it. But at present they sit still and wait. They will not take up the cross and confess Christ.

And what keeps them back? In a vast proportion of cases they are afraid to begin, lest they should later fail and fall away. They see innumerable difficulties before them if they serve Christ. They are quite right. It is vain to deny that there are difficulties, both many and great. They stand shivering on the brink of the vast sea on which we would have them embark, and as they mark the rolling, tumbling waves, their hearts faint. They see many a little boat on the waters of that sea, tossed to and fro, and struggling hard to make its way across, and looking as if it would be engulfed in the angry billows, and never get safe to harbor. "It is of no use," they feel, "it is of no use. We shall certainly fall away. We cannot serve Christ yet. The thing cannot be done." Now what is most likely to give courage to these halting souls? What is most likely to hearten them for the voyage? What is most likely to cheer their spirits, nerve their minds, and bring them to the point of boldly launching away? I answer without hesitation: the doctrine of final perseverance.

I would tell them that however great the difficulties of Christ's service, there is grace and strength in store to carry them triumphantly through all. I would tell them that these poor, praying, broken-spirited voyagers, whom they watch and expect to see cast away, are all safe as if they were already in harbor. They have each a pilot on board who will carry them safe through every storm. They are each joined to the everlasting God by a tie that can never be broken, and shall appear at length safe at the right hand of their Lord. Yes and I would tell them that they too shall all make a glorious end if they will only begin. I would have them know that if they will only commit themselves to Christ, they shall never be cast away. They shall not be plucked away by Satan. They shall never be left to sink and come to shame. Trials they may have, but none that the Spirit will not give them power to endure. Temptations they may have, but none that the Spirit will not enable them to resist. Only let them begin, and they shall be conquerors. But the great matter is to begin.

I believe firmly that one reason why so many wavering Christians hang back from making a decided profession is the want of encouragement which the doctrine of perseverance is intended to afford.

3. The doctrine of perseverance is of importance because of the special influence it is calculated to have on the minds of believers.

The number of true believers is at all times very small. They are a little flock. But even out of that flock there are few who can be called strong in faith, few who know much of uninterrupted joy and peace of believing, few who are not often cast down by doubts, anxieties, and fears.

It is useless to deny the way to heaven is narrow. There are many things to try the faith of believers. They have trials the world cannot understand. They have within a heart weak, deceitful, and not to be trusted, cold when they would be warm, backward when they would be forward, more ready to sleep than to watch. They have without a world that does not love Christ's truth and Christ's people—a world full of slander, ridicule, and persecution, a world with which their own dearest relations often join. They have ever near them a busy devil, an enemy who has been reading men's hearts for thousands of years, and knows exactly how to suit and time his temptations—an enemy who never ceases to lay snares in the way, who never slumbers, and never sleeps. They have the cares of life to tend to, like other people, the cares of children, the cares of business, the cares of servants, the cares of money, the cares of earthly plans and arrangements, the cares of a poor weak body, each daily thrusting itself upon their souls. Who can wonder that believers are sometimes cast down? Who ought not rather to marvel that any believers are saved? Truly I often think that the salvation of each saved person is a greater miracle than the passage of Israel through the Red Sea.

But, what is the best antidote against the believer's fears and anxieties? What is the most likely to cheer him as he looks forward to the untried future and remembers his weary past? I answer without hesitation: the doctrine of the final perseverance of God's elect. Let him know that God, having begun a good work in him, will never allow it to be overthrown. Let him know that the footsteps of Christ's flock are all in one direction. They have erred. They have been vexed. They have been tempted. But not one of them has been lost. Let him know that those whom Jesus loves, He loves unto the end. Let him know that he will not suffer the weakest lamb in His flock to perish in the wilderness, or the tenderest flower in His garden to wither and die. Let him know that Daniel in the den of the lions, the three children in the fiery furnace, Paul in the shipwreck, Noah in the ark, were none of them more cared for and more secure than the believer in Christ. Let him know that he is fenced, walled, protected, guarded by the almighty power by the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and cannot perish. Let him know that it is not the power of things present or things to come, of men or of devils, of cares within or troubles without, to separate one single child of God from the love that is in Christ Jesus (Rom 8:38-39).

This is strong consolation. These are the things which God has laid up in the gospel for the establishment and confirmation of His people. Well would it be for His people if these things were more brought forward than they are in the church of Christ. Verily, I believe that one reason of the saints' weakness is their ignorance of the truths which God has revealed in order to make them strong.

I leave the subject of perseverance here. I trust I have said enough to show you that I have not called your attention to it without cause. I feel strongly that the hardness of man's heart is such that nothing should be omitted in religious teaching which is likely to do it good. I dare not omit a single grain of truth, however strong and liable to abuse it may seem to be. Nothing appears to me of small importance which adds to the beauty of the gospel, or gives encouragement to the halting, or confirms and builds up God's people. I desire to teach that the gospel not only offers present pardon and peace, but eternal safety and certain continuance to the end. This I believe to be the mind of the Spirit. And what the Spirit reveals I desire to proclaim.

5. A Few Words of Application

And now I have brought before you, to the best of my ability, the whole subject of perseverance. I have told you as plainly as I can what I believe to be the truth as it is in Jesus. If I have offended you by anything I have said, I am sorry. I have no desire to pain any one, and least of all the children of God. If I have failed to convince you, I am sorry, but I am satisfied the defect is not in the doctrine I defend, but in my manner of stating it. It only remains to conclude by a few words of application.

1. For one thing, let me entreat you to consider well whether you have any part at all in the salvation of Christ Jesus.

It matters nothing about what you believe about perseverance, if after all you have no faith in Christ. It matters little whether you hold the doctrine or not, so long as you have no saving faith, and your sins are not forgiven, and your heart is not renewed by the Holy Ghost. The clearest head-knowledge will save no man. The most correct and orthodox views will not prevent a man perishing by the side of the most ignorant heathen if he is not born again. Oh! Search and see what is the state of your own soul.

You cannot live forever. You must one day die. You cannot avoid the judgment after death. You must stand before the bar of Christ. The summons of the archangel cannot be disobeyed. The last great assembly must be attended. The state of your own soul must one day undergo a thorough investigation. It will be found out one day what you are in God's sight. Your spiritual condition will at length be brought to light before the whole world. Oh! Find out what it is now. While you have time, while you have health, find out the state of your soul.

Your danger, if you are unconverted, is far greater than I can describe. Just in proportion to the thorough safety of the believer is the deadly peril of the unbeliever. There is but a step between the unbeliever and the worm that never dies, and the fire that is not quenched. He is literally hanging over the brink of the bottomless pit. Sudden death to the saint is sudden glory; but sudden death to the unconverted sinner is sudden hell. Oh, search and see what is the state of your soul!

Remember that you may find out whether you have an interest in the invitations to the gospel. It is a thing that may be known. It is nonsense to pretend that no man can tell. I never will believe that an honest man with a Bible in his hand will fail to discern his own spiritual condition by diligent self-examination. Oh, be an honest man. Search the Scriptures. Look within. Do not rest till you find out the state of your soul. To live on and leave the soul's state uncertain is not to play the part of a wise man but of a fool.

2. In the next place, if you know nothing of the privileges of the gospel, I entreat you this day to repent and be converted, to hear Christ's voice, and follow Him.

I know no reason, human or divine, why you should not accept this invitation today and be saved, if you are really willing. It is not the quantity of your sins that need prevent you. All manner of sin may be forgiven (Mat 12:31). The blood of Jesus cleanses away all sin (1Jo 1:7). It is not the hardness of your heart that need prevent you. A new heart God will give you, and a new spirit will He put in you (Eze 36:26). It is not the decrees of God that need prevent you. He wills not the death of sinners. He is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2Pe 3:9). It is not any want of willingness in Christ. He has long cried to men, "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely...him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (Rev 22:17; Joh 6:37). Oh, why should not you be saved?

A day must come, if you are ever to be God's child, when you will cease to trifle with your soul's interests. An hour must come when at last you will bend your knee in real earnestness, and pour out your heart before God in real prayer. A time must come when the burden of your sins will at last feel intolerable, and when you feel you must have rest in Christ or perish. All this must be if you are ever to become a child of God and be saved. And why not today? Why not this very night? Why not without delay seek Christ and live? Oh, answer me, if you can.

3. In the next place, let me entreat every reader who holds final perseverance, so to use this precious doctrine as not to abuse it.

There is an awful readiness in all men to abuse God's mercies. Even the children of God are not free from the sad infection. There is a busy devil near the best of saints, who would persuade them to make their privileges a plea for careless living, and to turn their soul's meat into poison. I cannot look round the Church and see the end to which many who make great professions come, without feeling that there is need for a caution. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (1Co 10:12).

Would we know what it is to abuse the doctrine of perseverance? It is abused when believers make their safety an excuse for inconsistencies in practice. It is abused when they make their security from final ruin an apology for a low standard of sanctification and a distant walk with God. Against both these abuses, I entreat believers to be on their guard.

Would we know what it is to use the doctrine of perseverance aright? Let us watch jealously over the daily workings of our own hearts. Let us mortify and nip in the bud the least inclination to spiritual indolence. Let us settle it down in our minds, as a ruling principle in our lives, that the mercies of God are only turned to a good account when they have a sanctifying effect on our hearts. Let us root it finally in our inward man that the love of Christ is never so really valued as when it constrains us to increased spiritual-mindedness. Let us set before our minds that the more safe we feel, the more holy we ought to be. The more we realize that God has done much for us, the more we ought to do for God. The greater our debt, the greater should be our gratitude. The more we see the riches of grace, the more rich we should be in good works.

Oh, for a heart like that of the Apostle Paul! To realize, as he did, our perfect safety in Christ—to labor as he did for God's glory, as if he could never do too much: this is the mark, this is the standard at which we ought to aim.

Let us use the doctrine of perseverance that our good may never be evil spoken of. Let us so adorn the doctrine, by our lives, that we may make it beautiful to others, and constrain others to say, "It is a good and holy thing to be persuaded that saints shall never perish."

4. In the last place I entreat all believers, who have hitherto been afraid of falling away, to lay firm hold on the doctrine of perseverance and to realize their own safety in Christ.

I want you to know the length and breadth of your portion in Christ. I want you to understand the full amount of the treasure to which faith in Jesus entitles you. You have found out that you are a great sinner. Thank God for that. You have fled to Christ for pardon and peace with God. Thank God for that. You have committed yourself to Jesus for time and eternity. You have no hope but in Christ's blood, Christ's righteousness, Christ's mediation, Christ's daily all-persevering intercession. Thank God for that. Your heart's desire and prayer is to be holy in all manner of conversation. Thank God for that. But oh! Lay hold upon the glorious truth that believing on Jesus you shall never perish, you shall never be cast off, you shall never fall away. It is written for you as well as for the apostle, "My sheep...shall never perish."

Would you have perfect peace in life? Then lay hold on this doctrine of perseverance. Your trials may be many and great. Your cross may be very heavy. But the business of your soul is all conducted according to an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure. All things are working together for your good. Your sorrows are only purifying your soul for glory. Your bereavements are only fashioning you as a polished stone for the temple above, made without hands. From whatever quarter the storms blow, they only drive you nearer to heaven. Whatever weather you may go through it is only ripening you for the garner of God. Your best things are quite safe. Come what will, you shall "never perish."

Would you have strong consolation in sickness? Then lay hold on this doctrine of perseverance. Think, as you feel the pins of this earthly tabernacle loosening one by one: "Nothing can break my union with Christ." Your body may become useless. Your members may refuse to perform their office. You may feel like an old useless log, a weariness to others, and a burden to yourself. But your soul is safe. Jesus is never tired of caring for your soul. You shall "never perish."

Would you have full assurance of hope in death? Then lay hold on this doctrine of perseverance. Doctors may have given over their labors. Friends may be unable to minister to your wants. Sight may depart. Hearing may depart. Memory may be almost gone. But the lovingkindness of God shall not depart. Once in Christ you shall never be forsaken. Jesus shall stand by you. Satan shall not harm you. Death shall not separate you from the everlasting love of God in Christ. You shall "never perish."

May this be your portion in life and death! And may it be mine!
